GUIDES OPPOSE USE OF SIGNS ON BATTLEFIELD

Attitude Is Explained At Special Meeting on Friday Evening.

3 TO PREPARE A RESOLUTION

Gettysburg's battlefield guides went on record as opposing the erection of directional signs on the battlefield at a special meeting of their association in the Eagle hotel, Friday evening.

For several months directional signs have been erected on the battlefield directing strangers over the proper course to follow in touring the field. The signs direct the visitor to various avenues and by a circuitous route over the 16,000-acre national park.

Ever since the beginning of the erection of the signs guides have been expressing their opposition and disfavor.

When the National Park service decided to place the signs on the field they did so for the purpose of doing something to assist the visitors who come her and inspect the field without the services of a guide, it was announced at the park office this morning.

The park service felt that by the erection of directional signs visitors could, if they so desired, motor over the field and not get lost, as has been the case in many instances.

Superintendent James R. McConaghie said it was the intent of the park service to do everything possible to cooperate with the guides and to render the greatest possible service without bias and without any intention of interfering with the guide business.

When the opposition persisted Mr. McConaghie asked the guides to supply him with an expression of their attitude. It was the desire and intention of the park superintendent to ascertain the attitude of those concerned or affected toward the erection of the signs.

The special meeting of the guides' association was not called as a protest or a meeting of indignation. It was summoned to ascertain the attitude of the guides in respect to the signs.

At Friday evening's meeting many guides expressed themselves as opposing the signs for various reasons.

Some of the most common expressions of opposition included:

The signs interfere with the guide business in that visitors gain the impression that they can tour the field without the assistance of the guide, whereas in many instances the visitor becomes confused and roams about the field, sometimes doubling over his tracks.

That the visitor is miguided by the signs in that he does not get a true story or a complete story or any essential information about what transpired here in 1863 without the assistance of a guide.

That the proper way for visitors to see the field and hear the true and correct story of the historic events that transpired here is to engage a guide and that by directional signs, if visitors take advantage of them, they see the field but do not hear the story.

That elimination of guide service here will cripple large industry in Gettysburg. One guide estimated that the guide service business in Gettysburg is worth at least $100,000 a year, more than 90 per cent of which is spent in the town.

Mr. McConaghie said this morning that he had not received the resolution of opposition adopted by the guides Friday evening but that as soon as he did he would give it careful study and attention and present it to the national park service for final decision.

Clyde Bream, Lloyd Hartman and Leander Martin were appointed a committee to prepare the resolution as adopted by the guides.

It is expected to be ready for presentation to Mr. McConaghie sometime next week.

GETS CONTRACT

Contractor O. H. Hostetter, Hanover, is making preparations for construction of a two-story building at the Reaser furniture company. Razing of a dwelling house adjoining the company's present office structure on York street has been started to provide a site for the new building, which will be used for additional office purposes and for a permanent furniture display room.

WHEAT CONTINUES UPWARD

Wheat reached its highest figure in over a year at the local warehouses today, $1.03 being paid per bushel.

Pup Crashes Social Register

Scandal reared its ugly head in New York society when it was revealed that "Miss Rose Morris," listed in the summer social register, was merely a dog—without a pedigree at that. The pup is shown with its owner, Mrs. G. L. K. Morris, whose husband is descended from a signer of the Declaration of Independence. When queried about the new "social registerite," Morris said his wife must have done it as a joke. (Associated Press Photo)

Only 8 Marriage Licenses Issued Here During July

30 Secured During Same Month in 1935; Three-Day Law Cuts Total.

There were eight marriage licenses issued by Clerk of the Courts Roy D. Renner during the month of July, compared with thirty issued during the same period last year.

Cupid's darts affected 29 couples during the month of June this year.

The July report reveals a decrease of 104 licenses issued here during the first seven months compared with the number issued during the same period a year ago.

From January 1 to August 1, 1936, Clerk Renner issued 86 marriage licenses. During the same period last year 190 couples received licenses to marry. The decrease is attributed to the new state law which requires that couples seeking marriage licenses must file their application three days before the license is issued. Because of this required delay many couples are "flocking" to Maryland, where they may apply for a license, receive the necessary papers and be married all within one hour.

While marriage licenses showed a marked decrease this July over the same month a year ago, Prothonotary C. Arthur Brame reports that three divorces were recorded here last month as compared with two in July, 1935.

INSPECTION OF BRIDGES ENDS

Commissioners Find Few Structures in County Need Minor Repairs.

Adams county's three commissioners and their clerk completed the annual inspection of bridges in this district on Friday.

The commissioners, S. Luther Baltzley, Mervin H. Benner and Edgar C. McDannell, and Clerk W. G. Horner, inspected bridges in Freedom, Liberty, Hamiltonban, Highland, Menallen and Butler townships on Friday. In previous tours of the county the commissioners inspected other structures.

Clerk Horner said this morning that the commissioners found all the structures inspected Friday in good condition with only a few minor repairs required on a few structures.

It was feared that many spans were damaged by the heavy snows and ice of the last winter and that floods in some sections had undermined other structures.

However, the inspection revealed the bridges in good condition, although considerable repairs had been previously made to some spans in the early months of the year.

EARLY MORNING CRASH HURTS 1

Mrs. Wm. Tonsil Cut and Bruised in Baltimore-Steinwehr Crossing Collision.

Mrs. William Tonsil, Breckenridge street, received treatment at the Annie M. Warner hospital early this morning when the automobile in which she and her husband, both colored, were riding collided with a machine driven by Lauren Taylor, Biglerville R. 2, at the intersection of Steinwehr avenue and Baltimore street.

Mrs. Tonsil was cut on the head and received bruises on the right cheek, left hand and both knees.

Tonsil was approaching Baltimore street, on Steinwehr avenue, at 1:45 o'clock this morning. Taylor was driving out Baltimore street. At the intersection the two machines collided almost head-on, according to Officer Charles W. Culp, of the borough police force, who investigated.

The right front of Taylor's machine was damaged and almost the entire front of Tonsil's car was smashed.

A passing motorist took Mrs. Tonsil to the hospital, where her injuries were treated, after which she returned to her home.

Officer Culp said that the damage to both machines will total about $70.

MEETING FOR FARMERS

Farmers of the sections of Adams and York counties hit by the hail storm will meet in the firemen's hall, Abbottstown, August 6, at 7:30 o'clock, to discuss the questions of rural rehabilitation and farm debt adjustments. The meeting was arranged by Harry L. Haines, of Red Lion, congressman from the York-Adams-Franklin district. Ralph H. Horst, Adams county rural rehabilitation agent, will be among the speakers.

Searchers Fail to Find WPA Workman

Harrisburg, Aug. 1.—Efforts to find Cletus Hess, missing Mt. Holly Springs WPA worker Friday, proved unsuccessful when the legionnaires, WPA workers and CCC boys ended the second day of scouring the South Mountains.

The members of the searching party beat the brush in the vicinity of Upper Holly where Hess was last seen on Tuesday. Friday the men resumed the search begun on Thursday, but found no traces of the missing man or any clues to indicate what might have befallen him.

Deaths and Burials

Isaac Daniel Mickley

Isaac Daniel Mickley, 74, farmer and fruit grower, died suddenly this morning at his home in Cashtown of a heart attack. He had been in failing health for some time. He would have observed his 75th birthday anniversary August 21.

The deceased was a son of the late Israel and Elizabeth (Rife) Mickley, of Franklin township. He was a life-long member of Trinity Evangelical-Reformed church, Cashtown, and for many years was an officer in the church.

Surviving are his widow, the former Miss Ida Trostle; one daughter, Mrs. C. E. Kuhn, and eight grandchildren, all of Cashtown.

Funeral services at the home Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, with further services at the Trinity Evangelical - Reformed church, Cashtown, the Rev. G. Howard Koons, pastor, officiating. Interment in Flohr's cemetery.

Mrs. John G. Cromwell

Mrs. John G. Cromwell, 53, Chambersburg, mother of Harold Cromwell, barber in the Eagle hotel building, died at 4:30 o'clock this morning, exactly 24 hours after she suffered a heart attack while sleeping.

Mrs. Cromwell was stricken at 4:30 o'clock Friday morning. She was rendered unconscious by the attack and never regained consciousness. She was the mother of ten children, all of whom are living.

The deceased was born in Franklin county.

She is survived by her husband; ten children, Erdman Cromwell, Chambersburg; William Cromwell, Philadelphia; Harold Cromwell, Gettysburg; and Florence, Marguerite, Miriam, Geraldine, John, Lloyd and Robert, all at home; two brothers, Edward and John Yeager, of Chambersburg, and two sisters, Mrs. Emma Bowman, of Chambersburg, and Mrs. Carrie Sterling, of Logansport, Indiana.

Funeral services from the home Tuesday afternoon with the Rev. Mr. Glenn, of Chambersburg, officiating. Interment in Chambersburg.

GIVE DATA OF FARM BUREAU

Officers Report Business Conditions at Meeting of Stockholders.

Stockholders of the Adams county farm bureau cooperative association, with offices and a warehouse on North Washington street, were called into special session Friday evening to hear a report on the comparison of business transacted over a three-year period. G. Marion Stambaugh, New Oxford, R. 3, is manager of the bureau.

F. A. Waybright, Water street, Gettysburg, president, presided and gave the stockholders information as to the amount of business transacted since 1934.

In that year the farm bureau reported $27,000 worth of business over a twelve-month period. In 1935 the association did $52,000 worth of business and for the first seven months of this year the volume of business transacted by the association totals $27,000.

Stockholders expressed their satisfaction with the amount of business so far this year. It was explained that the slack season for the bureau is from June 15 to August 15 and that the remaining five months of the year are expected to show an increase in business to exceed the previous high mark of 1935.

It was also explained that the purpose of the special meeting was to impress upon the stockholders their responsibilty for the success of the business.

Other officers of the association are M. F. Stoner, Fairfield, vice-president, and A. C. Keefer, McKnightstown, treasurer.

HOSPITAL REPORT

Guy Crist, Railroad street, was admitted as a patient to the Annie M. Warner hospital Friday and was discharged today.

Mrs. Glenn Minter, East Middle street; Mrs. John Ogden, Steinwehr avenue, and Mrs. Martin Steinour, Gettysburg R. 3, were admitted today. Mrs. Steinour submitted to an operation for the removal of her tonsils. Mrs. Edward Harris, Bendersville, was discharged as a patient.

Tear Gas Threats Quell Prison Riot

Salem, Oregon, Aug. 1 (AP).—A thrice-convicted murderer was killed and two other prisoners were wounded when inmates of the Oregon penitentiary rioted nearly three hours here Friday in protest against a court ruling refusing freedom to a prisoner.

Threats of a tear gas attack by 20 state policemen finally forced surrender of the 700 convicts, who had created pandemonium in the prison yard half the afternoon.

Under the cover of rifles held by state police on the walls, guards walked out to the prisoners and signalled them to lineup. Suddenly the men fell into ranks and filed back to their cells.

Thomas Baughn, 50-year-old convict, paid with his life as he and several others led nearly 100 yelling prisoners in a dash for the walls.

A bullet from the rifle of a guard felled him. The two other prisoners were wounded before the convicts ran for cover.

Wedding

Troxell—Garver

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Garver, of Smithsburg, Maryland, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Louise, to Jesse F. Troxell, the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Troxell, Emmitsburg, Md., which took place July 26, at the Evangelical Lutheran church. The ceremony was performed by the pastor, the Rev. Amos J. Traver.

The bride, who graduated from the Smithsburg high school in 1931, wore a blue crepe dress with white accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd H. Mann, of Rockville, were the attendants.

After a short wedding trip the couple will reside in Taneytown where the bridegroom is employed.

BIRTH ANNOUNCEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Minter, East Middle street, announce the birth of a seven-pound boy in the Annie M. Warner hospital this morning.

CENTRE MILLS PLANS 'ROAST'

Wieners Will Be Served at Community Affair on School Grounds August 6.

Officers of the Centre Mills community picnic held a meeting at the home of C. M. Conover Thursday evening. Due to the discontinuing of the picnic it was decided to hold a wiener roast Thursday evening, August 6, in its stead.

Free rolls and wieners will be served to all in the community and to friends. The wiener roast will be held on the Centre Mills school grounds and on the lawns of the C. M. Conover and the Edward Slaybaugh properties, where light and seating accommodations will be furnished. Those who are planning to attend are requested to bring song books containing old-fashioned songs. It is planned to have guitar accompaniment.

Money now in the treasury will be used to purchase supplies.

U. S. Ship Saves 92 In Palma Bombing

Washington, Aug. 1 (AP)—A narrow escape by 92 foreigners from a sudden bombing attack upon the Spanish city of Palma, in the Balleario Islands, Friday was reported to the state department.

Many of those who were literally snatched from possible injury or death under the aerial assault were believed here to be Americans.

The master of the American Export liner Exochorda reported that within a matter of minutes after he had taken the foreigners aboard and sailed from the harbor the bombs began to fall. He said he watched the bombardment from the steamer's bridge.

He gave no details, but state department officials, to whom the message was relayed by the steamship company's office in New York, expressed the belief that the liner's timely arrival probably saved the lives of many foreign nationals.

Highway Patrol Reports Decrease in Accidents

Although there is reported to have been a noticeable increase in traffic through Gettysburg and in the county in July this year compared with the same month of last year, a decrease in the number of accidents, arrests and amount of property damage is revealed in the July report of the local sub-station of highway patrol.

Seventeen accidents were reported last month by the local highway patrolmen, compared with 27 in July, 1935. Nineteen persons were injured this year compared with 34 in July 1935. Three fatalities were recorded in July, 1935, and none last month. Property damage for July, 1936 was $929 compared with $3,070 July, 1935. Thirty-three arrests were made this year against 90 last July.

For the first seven months of 1936 the total shows a still more noticeable decrease.

One hundred seventeen were reported from January 1, to today, with six fatalities. In the same period in 1935 there were 131 accidents and eight fatalities.

The following corresponding figures for the two years show the number of accidents and the fatalities each month:

	1935	1936
January	20—0	14—1
February	12—0	23—1
March	9—2	15—0
April	21—1	13—1
May	22—0	21—2
June	20—2	14—1
July	27—3	17—0

ANNUAL COUNTY TOUR TO INCLUDE DAUPHIN FARMS

Farmers, Dairymen, Fruit Growers Plan Visit on August 26.

EXCURSION CUT TO A HALF-DAY

The annual tour of neighboring county farms of the Adams county agricultural extension association will be made August 26, County Agent M. T. Hartman announced today. This year Adams county farmers, dairymen and fruit growers will inspect four or five farms in Dauphin county.

Last year the association failed to make its annual tour, many of the growers and farmers preferring not to take a day off from their heavy farm schedule to inspect other farms and although the association planned to make its tour regardless of the number who would be able to make the trip the decision was deferred until it was too late.

Different From Other Tours

Mr. Hartman said he was in contact with A. S. Frommeyer, County Agent for Dauphin county, and that he expects to have Mr. Frommeyer's suggestions as to the farms to visit some time next week.

The tour will be different from previous similar events in that it will consume only a half-day instead of a full day. Many farmers complained of the many miles they travelled and the tediousness of long hops, as well as the great number of farms they visited in other years. In view of this the tour this year will be concluded by noon.

The local delegation will leave the court house at 7:30 o'clock and pick up other members along the Harrisburg road. The party will continue to Harrisburg, where they will be met by County Agent Frommeyer, who will guide the party to the four or five farms in Dauphin county, selected for inspection by the Adams countians.

The farms will comprise dairy, poultry, hogs and general farm crop properties.

May Inspect Candy Factory

The tour will be concluded at Hershey park at noon, where the official party will disband for the noon picnic lunch. The members of the party will be "left on their own" for the balance of the day.

An opportunity will be given those who desire to inspect the Hershey chocolate factory and other attractions in the industrial community.

In previous years from 20 to 60 cars occupied by Adams countians made the annual tour. County Agent Hartman said this morning he is hopeful of having at least fifty cars in the touring party this year with between 250 and 300 persons comprising the delegation.

The tour will be recreational as well as educational, Mr. Hartman said.

Further details of the journey will be announced later.

BOARD IS TORN OFF WAREHOUSE

Officer Culp Investigates Report of Intruder Seen on Wentz Property.

What was believed to have been an attempt to loot the furniture warehouse of Roy W. Wentz, Baltimore street, Friday evening, turned into a mystery of no consequence without loss to the furniture dealer.

Harry Moser, North Washington street, en route home, reported to Officer Charles Culp, Jr., that he saw someone leaving the Wentz warehouse about 9:30 o'clock.

Officer Culp summoned Mr. Wentz and the two went to the warehouse to investigate. At the building, which is in the rear of the Baltimore street store, the officer found the door intact and locked.

Moser said he saw someone leaving the building and a closer investigation revealed that a small opening had been broken into one side of the building, large enough for a person of slender build to crawl through.

Investigating inside the warehouse the officer and Mr. Wentz found everything intact. None of the stored furniture had been disturbed.

It was then discovered that a board, which covered a square opening in the wall of the structure, had been pried off and that evidently some one had crawled out.

Officer Culp said he believes that

MOTHER HACKED TO DEATH; GIRL AND ESCORT HELD

Daughter Arrested With Boy Friend After Hatchet Slaying.

Bayonne, N. J., Aug. 1 (AP).—Police Chief Cornelius J. O'Neil announced today that Gladys MacKnight, 17, had confessed she killed her mother with a hatchet while her 18-year-old chorister sweetheart held the mother's arms.

The girl and her sweetheart, Donald Wightman, were booked on murder charges after an all-night questioning.

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 1 (AP).—Jersey City police Friday night arrested a 17-year-old girl and her young male companion in connection with the hachet murder of the girl's mother in Bayonne.

Police in a squad automobile, given a description of the car in which the couple drove from the girl's home, stopped them on a back highway through Jersey City.

They were Gladys MacKnight, June high school graduate and daughter of a Bayonne industrial plant manager, and Donald Wightman, 18, also of Bayonne.

Couple Questioned

They were taken to Jersey City police headquarters and questioned by acting Chief Harry W. Walsh, Bayonne police, notified of the arrest, sent officers to bring them back across the city line.

Edgar W. MacKnight, husband of the slain woman, found the body of his wife when he returned home from work. She was about 40.

Locked out of the house, MacKnight borrowed a screw driver from a neighbor, jimmied a window and climbed in.

Found Wife on Floor

In a crimson pool on the kitchen floor lay his wife. Her head was crushed and near by lay a shiny, new hatchet.

Mrs. Elizabeth Feury, who lives next door to the MacKnights, told Police Chief Cornelius J. O'Neill that she heard a scream about 5:30 p. m. while in her own kitchen.

Mrs. Feury went into her yard to find out what was the trouble and Gladys came to the window of the MacKnight home.

"Is your mother sick?" the neighbor said she asked.

"No, she's all right," she quoted the girl as replying. "Nothing is the matter."

Saw Some One Else

Mrs. Feury thought she saw some one else moving about in the MacKnight home, but returned to her own house.

Some time later, she told the police chief, she saw Gladys and young Wightman drive off in a car belonging to the girl's father.

Glenna, 7-year-old sister of Gladys, was playing in a neighbor's yard.

Chief O'Neill said neighbors told him the girl had been "mean to her sister recently and had quarreled with her mother.

Mrs. MacKnight, he said, apparently had been knocked down and struck several times as she lay on the floor.

Police said the address given for Wightman was that of the Robbins Reef Yacht club, and that he had been arrested some time ago for breaking open the safe of the club and taking $120. Charges were dropped, the police said, when the boy and his father made restitution.

The father, who is steward at the club, went to the MacKnight home after hearing of the killing.

Board Is Torn Off Warehouse

the person or persons had entered the building during the daytime when the door was unlocked and that when the store closed the warehouse was locked with the person or persons still inside. The officer said he does not believe it was an attempt to loot the building but that the person or persons became alarmed when they heard someone in the warehouse at closing time and that they did not want to make themselves known, preferring to be locked in and take a chance on getting out without being detected.

The structure had previously been used as a stable. When the building was converted into a furniture warehouse the openings were covered by nailing boards over them from the inside.

It was a simple thing, Officer Culp said, for the persons or persons in the building, to pry off one of the boards and crawl through to make his escape.

ORRTANNA NEWS ITEM

Mrs Stella Engel, of Orrtanna, who attended the funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth Warner, of Shiremanstown, last week, used to be employed in the Warner household. She also was present when Mrs. Warner celebrated her one-hundredth birthday anniversary. It was incorrectly stated in the Orrtanna news of last week that the deceased at one time resided with Mrs. Engel.

REICH AND ITALY DECIDE ON NEW LOCARNO PARLEY

London, Aug. 1 (AP).—A fresh attempt to write a new pact guaranteeing the peace of uneasy Europe was launched Friday night with German and Italian acceptance of invitations to participate in a five-power Locarno conference this fall.

Almost simultaneously, the nazi and fascist nations announced they had agreed to sit down with France, Great Britain and Belgium in an effort to work out a substitute for the Locarno treaty entered into in 1925 and denounced by Chancellor Adolf Hitler March 7, when he marched troops into the Rhineland.

Acceptances of the invitations, which were extended last week following a meeting of representatives of France, Belgium and Great Britain in London, were received with deep satisfaction in London's official circles.

"First Hurdle Passed"

"The first hurdle is passed," an authoritative source said, but it was pointed out "there are other hurdles beyond."

No date for the conference has been set, but it was expected to be held either before or after the meeting of the league of nations assembly in Geneva in September.

Both Germany and Italy stressed the need it be preceded by careful diplomatic negotiations.

GARNER SQUIRREL BITES HAND THAT FEEDS HIM

Uvalde, Tex., Aug. 1 (AP).—Snowy-haired John Garner, far removed from the affairs of nation, spent his vacation Friday with all the carefree leisure of a country gentleman.

Outside of one of his pet squirrels biting him on the finger, the vice president's weeks of recreation at his Uvalde home have been uneventful. He was nipped while feeding one of the little animals from his hand.

The weather has been too hot to do much fishing, so Garner has been taking it easy, lounging in a shady hammock under the trees.

ORDER NEW LINER

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE

A New Novel by Marian Sims

SYNOPSIS: Carol Torrance has decided to teach in the Ashboro high school in order to get away from her home town of Meredith, Ga., and to make a start to some sort of a career. And although she is warned by the spiteful interest of a gossipy old neighbor in the golf game she played Sunday, she is determined to try to treat her scholars as intelligent boys and girls. She has won one class and observed therein the handsomest boy she ever has seen. Now she has a French class.

MAGNIFICENT YOUTH

Carol's next class was second-year French, also made up of seniors. Fourteen girls and seven boys, the beautiful youth among them. She spent the twenty minutes talking about France and the things that had happened during the months she had spent there five years ago, the summer after she had graduated.

She made them see French as a living language, not something that had been elected the previous year because the course was a "crip."

Avignon, and the Palace of the Popes; Cannes and Nice, and the ancient towns of the maritime Alps. Paris and the architectural legacies of Napoleon; Pere LeChaise, the resting-place of the great and the near great; the vicinity of St. Sulpice, of which they would read in "Les Trois Mousquetaires." . . . Then she dismissed them, conscious of one more victory, at least for the time being.

Her third period was vacant, and she began to post names alphabetically in her roll book. Someone entered the room, and she glanced up to find the magnificent youth towering above her.

She smiled at him. "How do you do?"

"Morning." He hesitated. "Can I talk to you a while?"

"Of course. Sit down." She motioned to the first desk and he crowded into it, filling it completely.

He was more than six feet tall, and he must weigh a hundred and eighty, she thought—most of it above the waist. His eyes were a brilliant blue and his features might have been by Praxiteles. He moved and spoke with a drawl, and she guessed that his brain drawled too. She was consumed with curiosity about him.

"My name's Mike Hannighan," he said. "I wanta tell you about me and get you to help me."

Who wouldn't help him! she thought, and kept her face serious as she said: "That's quite a compliment. Of course I'll help you."

"I been out of school four years," he went on in the same deliberate voice, as if he tested every word before he said it. "I got expelled when I was sixteen—a week before school closed. I studied this summer and took examinations to get back in."

She wondered why he was expelled, and didn't ask. Instead she said: "What did you do in those four years?"

"Travelled around on ships." His voice was entirely casual. After four years of it there was nothing romantic about travelling around on ships. "I ran away and got a job on a coastwise freight boat. Since then I been about everywhere in the world." He said it simply, with no hint of boasting.

Carol felt suddenly small and unimportant in the face of his complete simplicity.

"What made you come back?"

"I wasn't getting anywhere." Nowhere, she thought, except all over the world! "My father works in a cotton mill, and he's had a terrible time till right now. I didn't want to be like him, and I didn't want to be a tramp seaman all my life. And you have to have education if you want to be somebody, so I came back to finish high school and go to college. I can get to college on football," he explained. "I've already got an offer."

She laughed in relief. "That's the first time I ever thought much of the system. Now where do I come in?"

"When you been knocking around for four years it's kinda hard to settle down in any high school. I may start off fine, and then get to slipping, and I want you to sort of check up on me. I'll study for you—I'd do anything for you," her own quick pleasure startled her—"but I may get rough with some of the other teachers before I think. If I do get rough, you call me in and remind me about all this. Cuss me out."

Without doubt, she thought wildly, this was the most astonishing conversation she had ever had. She said judicially:

"I'll be glad to do it if it's necessary. But I don't see why it should be. Now that you've decided on it, haven't you got—" he would have said "guts," and so would she, if he hadn't been looking at her like that and if he hadn't been a pupil—"will power enough to stay with it?"

"I would if they were all like you, but you're the only teacher I ever saw that I respected. They make me sick as hell—" He caught himself and flushed crimson. "Excuse me, Miss Torrance; that's from being a bum."

She laughed. "Oh, I've heard of it before." And used it, she thought, with monotonous regularity. Mike Hannigan might take a lot of living up to.

He got up, and she realized in astonishment that he was holding out his hand. She gave him her own, and his grip was paralyzing.

"You're aces, Miss Torrance. I sure do thank you."

He strode out of the room. Carol stared at his splendid back and rubbed her fingers and tried to think what she would say to the class in European History. Thank heaven Mike Hannigan wouldn't be in that!

The week wore on. Classes stopped being entities and became groups of individuals; some intelligent, some average, a few hopelessly dull—dwellers in Moronia.

For the most part her work ran smoothly. Later, she knew, the novelty of her presence and her method would wear off and rebellion would probably lift its head. But there was no use in anticipating the struggle.

Even her qualms about the football squad had not thus far materialized. To her astonishment the gorilla proved to have exquisite manners, that sat upon him as oddly as a curled and scented wig. She wondered at the deference of these incongruous beings who were neither men nor children, and stumbled quite by accident on one explanation. Mike, she heard by grapevine route, had announced in vivid and salty language what he would do to the first so-and-so who started anything in her classes or out.

Mike himself dropped in almost daily, and greeted her with a warm Irish grin that disconcerted her more than she cared to admit.

"How'm I doin'?"

"Beautifully, and you know it."

The astonishing part was that it was true. He stalked learning slowly and inexorably; sank his teeth into it and held on grmily. Probably his interest would wane, but now he was travelling a route he had never traveled before, and finding the voyage good.

Only one thing worried her; that the girls had discovered him. They fluttered over him, and borrowed his pencils, and wanted to be shown where the lesson ended; anything would do as an excuse. Mike answered them patiently, without even looking at them, entirely unaware that the interruptions were pretexts.

There were letters during the week from Milly and Jill and Pat; and one stilted, yearning note from Don, who was incapable of putting himself on paper. Reading a letter from Don made him more unreal and distant than ever.

Milly's letter was a sort of daily paper. So-and-so was in Atlanta; she had played bridge with so-and-so, and held terrible hands. Carol's room was rented to a Miss Andrews, who taught fifth grade. . .

Jill was entirely matter-of-fact. The Andrews gal wasn't bad, and nine times twenty was a hundred and eighty, which would go into the summer hell-raisin' fund. Don Richards had drifted in Sunday night, and the four of them had sat on the terrace and counted fourteen shooting stars. . . .

Pat's letter was equally characteristic. Don Richards had returned on Sunday like a ghost to the scene of its demise. Business was looking up. He was trying to keep his word about the writing. "I'm doing a series of sketches about local characters and folklore: not good yet, of course, but good practice. If I get any amount of stuff done I may send it down for you to pass on."

She wrote Jill and Milly a joint letter, but Pat deserved a separate one, she felt, for the effort he was making. "Send the sketches to me anyhow," she ordered, "and if any of them have possibilities I'll act as agent until I can talk a real one into taking you on." She knew from other days that Pat wasn't eual to the soul-searing experience of seeing his manuscripts come back.

And suddenly it was Friday, and one of the thirty-six weeks had slid, unwept, into oblivion.

M'Mahon Explains 'Threat' to King

Meant Merely to Attract Attention To Unjust Treatment, He Says.

London, Aug. 1 (AP). — George Andrew McMahon, who wrote King Edward he suffered "tortures of a damned soul," huddled in Brixton prison Friday night to await criminal trial for hurling a pistol at his monarch.

For two hours, while rain pelted the skylight of the dingy old courtroom in Bow street, McMahon poured out his story of mental misery.

Speaking in a meek, hushed voice, dropping at times to a sobbing whisper, he recited in detail the brooding thoughts which led him to Constitution hill when the king rode by two weeks ago.

At first, the 34-year-old Scottish-born Irishman testified, he intended to kill himself.

"I saw all the people happy and content. Then I remembered I had hardly the price of a meal. I thought; 'What is the good of living?' I was going to shoot myself."

But, he added, thoughts of his wife deterred him.

"The thought suddenly struck me that if I could only draw the king's attention to the wrongs I imagined had been meted out to me, at least he would not allow his subjects to be so treated.

"I saw his majesty approaching through crowds of happy, cheering people. I never pointed the revolver—I stopped and slithered it to the roadway as his majesty came up."

The mental anguish which drove him to act, McMahon said, dated back to "suffering during unjust imprisonment" following conviction for criminal libel in 1933—a conviction later quashed.

Admits Shirley Temple Threat In Effort to Extort $25,000

Nebraska Farm Boy, 16, Arrested by G-Men After Trace Watermark on Letter Addressed To Star's Father.

Washington, Aug. 1 (AP)—J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the federal bureau of investigation, announced Friday night that Sterling Wardron Powell, 16-year-old farm boy of Grant, Nebraska, confessed writing an extortion letter demanding $25,000 from the father of Shirley Temple, child movie star.

Federal officials said the letter read:

"Unless $25,000 is dropped from an airplane near Grant, Nebraska, on May 15, the life of Shirley Temple will be endangered."

Agents quoted George Temple, the little actress' father, as saying the letter was not opened until May 18, three days after the deadline set by the letter.

Mr. and Mrs. Temple and their daughter are now touring the northwest.

With the Temples is their chauffeur, who also acts as a bodyguard and a studio publicity man.

They checked out of a San Francisco hotel Thursday.

The 7-year-old star has been closely guarded against possible kidnapping attempts.

The actress' earnings are estimated at about $500,000 a year.

Federal agents disclosed that they were immediately called to the Temple home after the letter was opened. They urged that Shirley be kept under heavy guard and in seclusion during their investigation.

Powell was being taken Friday night by agents of the Omaha bureau to North Platte, Neb., where he will be arraigned before A. F. Streitz, United States commissioner.

His arrest came after weeks of work by operatives from the Omaha office. Its envelope missing, the letter, written on common stationery in long hand, was turned over to bureau of investigation agents in Los Angeles and traced to Grant by its watermark.

ABOUT MONEY

If I could take it when I die
To bribe old Charon for a seat
Which poorer persons could not buy;
I say, if in my winding sheet
There pockets could be wide and deep
And stout enough a purse to hold.
Then while I live I'd try to keep
Great stacks of silver and of gold.

If I could put it in a bale
And have it shipped along with me.
By Heaven-bound express or mail,
Suppsing it would useful be.
Then I would think it very wise
Myself and others to deny
The joy and comfort money buys
And cling to it until I die.

But since I have to leave it all
And empty-handed journey on
When comes to me that final call,
Why should they wait till I am gone
To know the joys when I am dead
Oh, no! A thousand times instead
Which I alive would not allow?
I'd rather see them happy now!

Convicted Kidnap Plotter Ends Life

J. P. Peifer, Given 30 Years in Hamm Case, Found in Coma In Cell.

St. Paul, Aug. 1 (AP). — John P. Peifer, convicted kidnap plotter in the William Hamm, Jr., case, ended his life in his jail cell—presumably by chewing poisoned gum — two hours after he had been sentenced Friday to serve thirty years in prison.

The former St. Paul night-club operator, branded by a federal court jury the "fingerman" in the $100,000 abduction, thus became the second suicide growing out of the three-year-old crime.

The first was "Stir Crazy" Willie Sharkey, Chicago Touhy gang member, who hanged himself with his necktie in his cell here two years ago after he and fellow-gangsters had been acquitted on charges of kidnapping Hamm.

Three jailers, summoned by fellow-prisoners when Peifer appeared to be in convulsions, called in rescue squads which attempted to revive him. But their efforts were futile.

Dr. W. D. Kelly, physician for the federal government, who examined Peifer's body before it was taken to the county morgue for a post-mortem, expressed the opinion the prisoner had effected his death by chewing poison mixed with gum that was found in his mouth.

AT WESKAWENAAK

I COULD be happy in a thousand places, for happiness is not entwined about mere place. But Weskawenaak—here in glorious Nova Scotia—is a place set apart. Its rocky shores, its mossy paths, its great hemlocks and variated pines, its absolute quiet, broken only by the sounds of beating waves, or orchestrated melodies, played by the wind, or the echo of songsters that flit from tree to tree—each, and all, melt into the harmony of this little paradise island.

And so it is that here I come each year for a few brief weeks to rebuild much that I have lost, to gain new bearings, and to refurnish my mind.

Weskawenaak is a translation of the word—peace; I never quite appreciated Longfellow's phrase about the "murmuring pines and hemlocks" until I found it here. The white birches that stand as guards about the window from which I write, inherit the very personality of this divine spot. How grateful I am to the one who first led me here!

Last night I stood upon the lawn of a friend's estate across the lake and viewed those lovely Northern Lights. Great streaks of light shot, like giant arrows, that almost reached the edge of the north star. And like a flash, each would disappear, and newer and bolder ones take their place, or a vast illumination would play about their base.

Never anywhere does God seem so real and genuine as he does here. Here you begin to understand what that "peace that passeth all understanding" actually means. It flows right through you. Here the "mind of the universe" is revealed. You need no translator.

John Burroughs once said that he went to a certain place to "rest and pray," to meditate—that it was "so easy to get lost in the world." You find yourself anew in Weskawenaak. Its Micmac meaning is "Happy Land"—and so accurately named it is!

From some spots you can travel the whole wide world, and journey to the doorsteps of a thousand—yes, tens of thousands of hearts. For me, at least, Weskawenaak is that spot!

ROBERT S. FRAZER DIES

Pittsburgh, Aug. 1 (AP).—Robert S. Frazer, 86-year-old former chief justice of the Pennsylvania supreme court, died Friday.

The veteran jurist, who sat on the supreme court bench twenty-one years before retiring last July, had been ill from pneumonia and complications developing after an operation. He was taken to a hospital a week ago.

SON OF LATE SENATOR MARRIES

Mrs. Martha Lillian Coupal, widow of Maj. J. F. Coupal, once White House physician, was revealed in Washington as the bride of Thomas D. Schall, jr., 26, whom she first met when, as a midshipman, he was treated by her husband after an automobile accident. Schall is the son of the late blind senator from Minnesota. They were married July 18 at Carmody, Vt. (Associated Press Photo)

Canada and U. S. Set Example For World, Says Roosevelt

Speaking at Quebec, President Affirms Need for Frank Dealing and Cites Friendship Between Nations as Aid to Peace.

Quebec, Aug. 1. (AP).—Cementing anew America's friendship for her neighbor on the north, President Roosevelt in a speech there Friday called for "frank dealing" and a "spirit of give and take" in settling all problems facing the world.

Standing on a platform covered with American and British flags at the foot of the monument to Wolfe and Montcalm on Dufferin terrace, the American Chief Executive, speaking in English and French, responded to a big ovation and official greetings by holding up dispute-free Canadian-American relations as a fine example for other nations to follow.

Gala Throng Greets Him

It was a gala throng that turned out to greet with pomp and fanfare the first American President to pay an official call here. Thousands spread out on the broad terrace heard his address and those of Lord Tweedsmuir, governor-general; Premier Mackenzie King, and other ranking Canadian officials.

Scarlet-coated troops, mounted and on foot, served as guard of honor at the depot and at the terrace, where a twenty-one-gun salute echoed over the St. Lawrence from the citadel, summer residence of the governor-general, as the President was being welcomed. Red and blue uniformed Royal Canadian mounted police assisted secret service men in protecting him.

Confers With Officials

After the speech-making the President went to the citadel for a private luncheon given by the Governor-general and Lady Tweedsmuir for conferences on problems afnor-general and Lady Tweedsmuir fecting the two countries with Lord Tweedsmuir and the premier.

Mr. Roosevelt had told newspaper men previously he would take up the possibility of mutual development of hydroelectric power in Passamaquoddy bay and on the St. Lawrence.

"In the solution of grave problems that face the world today," the President said in his terrace address, "frank dealing, co-operation and a spirit of give and take between nations is more important than ever before.

Share Common Democracy

"The United States and Canada and, indeed, all parts of the British Empire share a democratic form of government which comes to us from common sources. We have adapted these institutions to our own needs and our own special conditions, but fundamentally they are the same."

Hairs Held Latest Clue in Co-Ed Case

Four Strands Found on Towel in Hotel Bathroom of Slain Helen Clevenger.

Asheville, N. C., Aug. 1 (AP).—Four strands of hair from a white man's head, found on a towel in the slain Helen Clevenger's hotel bathroom, Friday gave police their newest hope of tracking down the killer of the 18-year-old Staten Island girl.

Described as dark and straight, the hairs took their place beside a rusty .32-caliber bullet and an exploded shell, of non-standard make, as physical clues to the intruder who entered the girl's room during a raging thunderstorm at 1 a. m., July 16, shot her through the body, battered her face, and then escaped.

Existence of another possible clue was disclosed by Police Chief William J. Everett. A pair of scissors which might have been used in the mutilation of Mrs. Clevenger's face, he said, were turned in a few days ago by a woman who reported finding them in a garbage can.

The scissors, found July 23, in the trash receptacle a block and a half from the scene of the crime, gave a positive reaction under a blood-stain test, he said, although they had been washed by their finder.

WHEAT CROWDS OUT SOY-BEANS

Harbin, Manchoukuo (AP)—Wheat seems to be crowding out the soy-bean in this region. As millers and grain-dealers checked their stocks this spring they found only half as many soy-beans, and twice as much wheat on hand as at this time last year.

Bible School to Open Near Chambersburg

For the fourth consecutive year the Philadelphia school of the Bible will conduct its annual midsummer Bible conference at Greenwood Hills, near Chambersburg. The conference will convene Sunday and continue for 16 days.

A strong array of speakers has been engaged for the conference. The Rev. William Culbertson, both of the school's faculty, will speak during the first week, aided by Dr. Harold Commons, president of a missionary society working in the Philippine Islands.

Speakers the second week will include Dr. Arthur Forest Wells, Presbyterian preacher from Baltimore, Maryland. Dr. Albert Huges, Baptist pastor from Toronto, Canada, and the Rev. William Allan Dean, member of the school faculty.

Other leaders of the conference will be Mrs. O. B. Kiesewetter, of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, who will be conference hostess; Miss Esther A. Meyer, member of the school staff who will be conference secretary, and Horace F. Dean, treasurer of the school, who will direct the conference.

The music will be under the leadership of the Rev. Franklin M. Wiley, of Philipsburg. Harold Waltz, of Altoona, is conference pianist.

Horses and mules in Oklahoma decreased by 2,000 between 1930 and 1935, according to a recent farm census.

Italy Hears "Voices" of Hollywood Stars; New Process Is Employed

By GEORGE C. JORDAN
(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Rome (AP).—"It's hard work," said Greta Garbo's "voice" and Fredric March's nodded in agreement.

Resting in the grove outside the studio, with Marlene Dietrich's and Victor McLaglen's "voices," they were discussing the troubles of the "dubs," as they label themselves. Garbo's "voice" rattled on, with March's finding room for an occasional word.

"Anna Sten has had a hard day," he said, indicating Marlene Dietrich's voice. "She's been doing the same scene now for two hours."

'Garbo' A Chatterbox

"Anna Sten and la Dietrich are the same person, you know," explained the talkative Garbo voice.

Commendatore Arminio Conte, Italian film importer, came to the rescue.

"Perhaps I'd better present these actors by their real instead of their reel names," he said.

"This is Signorina Tina Lattanzi, Greta Garbo's voice to Italy's movie fans. Frederic March there, who is also Franchot Tone, Robert Montgomery, Nelson Eddy and a half dozen other Hollywood players, is Giulio Panicali. Anna Sten here, who also is Marlene Dietrich professionally, is Lidia Simoneschi. Victor McLaglen (indicating a husky Italian actor) is Camillo Pilotto."

Intricate System Used

Italians are proud of their "doppiaggio," as they call the process of putting English spoken films into Italian. The best of modern equipment is combined with the talents of writers who not only translate the words, but write script requiring the same or similar lip movements as the American dialogue.

When this has been done, Italian actors read the parts under guidance of an exacting director.

Eight hours is an average day's work for a "voice." It takes about three weeks to turn out a film. The pay ranges from $5 to $20 a day.

The directors first tried having the "dubbers" imitate the original voice. But a mishap showed the danger. An Italian actress was endeavoring to drawl Garbo's lines in the deep voice known to Americans. At a serious moment in one of the romances she said huskily:

"Da-a-a-a mi un cigare-e-e-e-ete," ("Give me a cigarette.")

Italian audiences howled and ever since vaudeville comedians have been getting laughs with basso profundo requests for cigarettes.

Garbo's voice now is the pleasant tinkle of a Latin signorina, only a shade deeper than the average here.

HURLER BREAKS ARM, STAYS IN BALL GAME

Richmond, Va. (AP)—About the third inning they began knocking Pitcher Frank Gatewood's deliveries all over the lot.

But he stayed in the box because he was the only hurler his team had in uniform.

After the game Gatewood complained of an elbow pain. Examination disclosed he had broken his arm while pitching.

NEW YORK HAS 1 PRIVATE PARK

Walled in Garden Between 20th and 21st Streets Remains a Souvenir.

By GEORGE TUCKER

New York—One of the remaining souvenirs of an elder day in New York is that restricted, walled-in garden between 20th and 21st streets which is known as Gramercy park.

This is the only private park in New York and was conceived by an early gadabout named Ruggles, who spent a lot of time running over to Europe and back. You didn't do much running when you went to Europe in those days, it being over 100 years ago, you mosied along taking some months to cross the Atlantic.

Ruggles was one of those strolling fellows who liked to browse through the London residential districts, and it was while under the spell of these pursuits that he got the idea of a private park for New York.

You'll have to credit him with some honest foresight—he believed New York would one day become a strapping big town, although at the time it was little more than a Dutch village in a wilderness on whose fringes still lurked unfriendly savages.

* * *

So he came back to Manhattan and put his machinery for a park in operation. There was a hill at that time and a winding creek which threaded its way through the community. This creek bore the good Dutch name of Crommessie, meaning Little Crooked Knife. Ruggles liked the creek, but didn't think much of the hill, so he leveled it off and cut two wide roads at either end of his park, naming them Lexington avenue, after the battle of Lexington, and Irving place, after Washington Irving, who used to live there.

Ruggles then pulled a few political strings and drew up a series of stipulations which vexed some settlers, but earned the approval of others. For instance, you couldn't erect any building there under three stories in height. This resulted in a uniformity of architecture on the park frontage and kept out the low shanties.

Gramercy park today is a quiet and charming, though snooty, retreat. Encased in its high iron fence, it is forbidden to all save residents of the buildings which actually front the park. Each resident has a private key which unlocks the big gate, and it is there that the children of these fortunates romp and play in the sunshine and flowers.

The history of Gramercy is studded with legal coups and controversies, for the tax collectors have striven for years to make of it a source of revenue. However, the boys put up such a bitter battle that today it is tax free.

Walled in by its high buildings, today the park is known as one of the really important landmarks of the city. Bordering it is the Parkside hotel, which is on the site of the original Columbia club. The Players' club, famous for its membership of theatrical greats, and also the National Arts club lend their significance to the community.

Seeing Gramercy park is something that should be done, even though one must glimpse it as one might glimpse a tiger in a zoo—through the iron bars.

East Weber, Utah, once a town of 5,000 persons, has shrunk to 300 and is now known as Uintah. Change in freight routes shifted business and population to Ogden.

BRITISH SHIPYARDS BUSY BUT WANT MORE ORDERS

London (AP).—More than a million tons of merchant shipping were found under construction in shipyards of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, by a survey of the "Shipping World."

In addition 64 naval vessels, including two for Poland, two for Estonia and three for Argentina, are under construction or have been ordered.

Despite this revival, less than half the shipbuilding capacity is being employed and more than a third of the registered shipyard workers are idle.

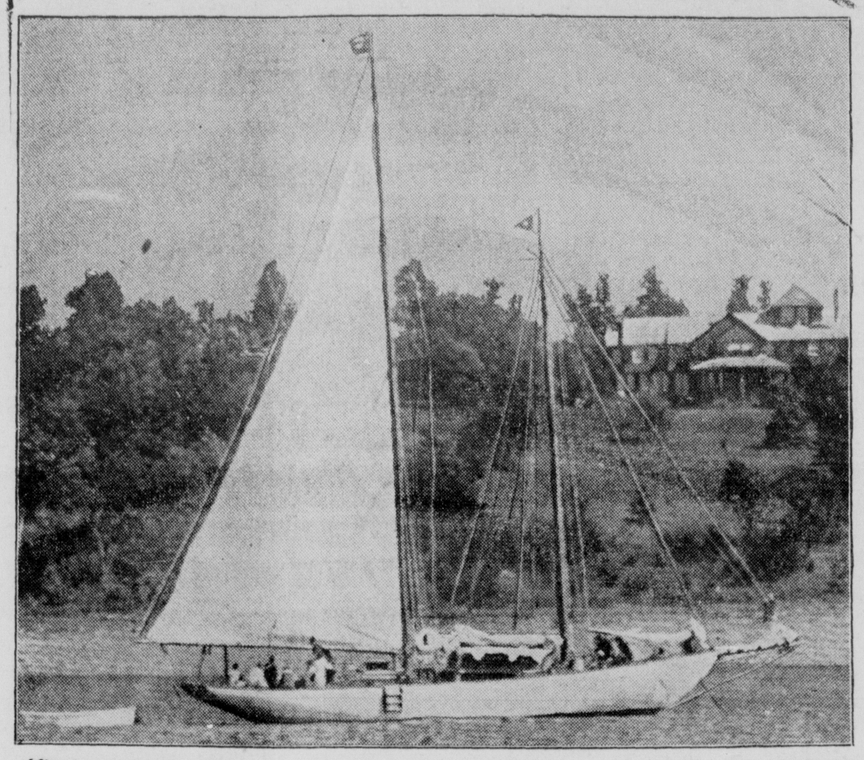
SKIPPER ROOSEVELT REACHES CAMPOBELLO



After two weeks of yachting in northern waters, President Roosevelt and his three sons anchored the presidential yacht Sewanna in the bay at Campobello, New Brunswick, where the Roosevelts have a summer home. The home is shown in the background. (Associated Press Photo)

SAVED IN LAKE TRAGEDY; 15 MATES LOST

Seven members of the crew of the lake barge "Material Service" were rescued when the ship capsized in Lake Michigan within a stone's throw of Chicago. Fifteen others, including the captain, were feared drowned. The survivors, with coast guardsmen, are shown in a lighthouse after the rescue. Standing, left to right: J. M. Carlson, coast guard; Jack Johnson, survivor; C. D. Pierce, A. C. Gross, guards; Joe Change, survivor; John Larson and Mark Jordan, guards. Front, left to right, Joe Weber, Elton Washburn and Herbert Larson, survivors. (Associated Press Photo)

REBELS SHOULDER GUNS IN NORTHERN SPAIN

A section of Spain's rebel army, obviously civilians converted into soldiers, were mobilized at Burgos, Fascist stronghold in the north, where much of the campaign against the government was mapped. (Associated Press Photo)

The failure of congress to appropriate sufficient funds to complete the proposed Passamaquoddy tidal power project in Maine has resulted in an exodus of many residents from the neighborhood of the development's model village (above). However, President Roosevelt declared, after visiting the village, that he hoped it would be completed. (Associated Press Photo)

REBELS, IN BIG PUSH, READY FOR MADRID BATTLE

Crux of Rebellion Due As Insurgents Smash Way From North.

(By the Associated Press)

Spain's capital—Madrid—dug in today for the fascist assault which may prove to be the turning point of the nation's prolonged civil war.

Defenses were strengthened. Fresh offenses were ordered against rebel strongholds both north and south of Madrid.

Yesterday's flury in French political circles over the possibilities of international repercussion from a flight of Italian seaplanes to Spanish Morocco seemed to have simmered down to France's statement of neutrality.

Political sources in Great Britain have turned a deaf ear to France's suggestion of a British, French and Italian agreement for neutrality.

Oblegordo, Northern Rebel Headquarters, Spain, Aug. 1.—The rebel army of Gen. Emilio Mola smashed its way forward Friday night on its march toward Madrid. The column with which this correspondent traveled reached the outskirts of Buitroga, thirty-eight miles from the capital.

I witnessed heavy fighting which marked victory for the fascists attacking the town. The rebels lost 30 men and seventy-two were wounded.

Fascist officers estimated enemy losses at more than 300 dead with twice as many wounded.

Col. Garcia Escamez commanded the victorious column, one of the three under General Mola's leadership in the march against Madrid.

Loyalists Abandon Guns

The fascists who captured this village Monday resumed the offensive after marking time for two other columns advancing through Leon and Nabacerrada passes in the Guadarrama mountains in parallel paths.

Government forces were completely routed by the pounding of fascists' 17-centimeter guns. They abandoned three cannon and several machine guns.

Highways were cluttered with loyalist trucks and artillery supply wagons left in the retreat.

Fascist forces were estimated at 3,000, with about an equal number of loyalists.

Artillery Pounds Buitroga

The rebels were pounding Buitroga with batteries of field guns. Colonel Escamez said his men shot down a tri-motored transport plane used by the Madrid government as a bomber. He said it was shot down with machine guns, but correspondents were not shown the wreckage.

Colonel Escamez, from whose headquarters in a battered villa I watched the fighting, refused to say how long he expected it would take him to capture Madrid.

General Mola had prophesied "three to four days" at the beginning of the week, but Colonel Escamez admitted it would be a "hard job."

WHEN THE WELL RUNS DRY:

RECENTLY, a man called up at 5:20 A. M. to say that he couldn't wash his face because he had no water. A broken line did it. At 5:50 the lines were rearranged and he had water again. That gentleman's "well" had run dry at a bad time and he missed it. We're genuinely sorry when that occurs, but pipes being pipes, breaks will happen.

When you're out of water, regardless of the hour or the weather, we'd like you to know that somebody's on the job doing his best to restore your service just as soon as it can be done.
